

Who Says More, Who Says Less (Qui dit plus, qui dit moins)

Author : Jean-Pierre Dopagne

Publisher: Lansman Editions, in 2004

First Production: In 1997, in the framework of a writing competition, 'A Stage for Two'

Theme: Time which passes, and the absurdity of its rapidity.

Genre : Comedy

Form: Dialogue

Length: +/- 10 minutes

Casting: 2 characters

Comments:

Numerous possibilities for exercises, games, or for school presentations using different stagings.

Synopsis:

A short scene of about ten minutes, with two characters who talk about this or that, about everything and nothing, with rhythm and many overtones.

Extract:

More The world never goes quickly enough. When I think that not that many years ago, it took weeks to cross the Atlantic by boat !...

Less Today, a millionth of a second is all it takes to get crushed by a high speed train.

More It's fascinating! Intoxicating! Hallucinatory ! Soon we will go faster than the speed of light !

Less ...

More You aren't going to say anything more?

Less I spoke so quickly you didn't hear anything.

More I knew that it was very difficult to make a donkey shift but you are more donkey-like than a donkey.

Less Donkeys are very intelligent animals.

More And capable of such speed!
